

Adam Voigt

An educator | A leader | A passionate advocate for teachers and kids and a bloody good speaker!

Meet Adam

An acclaimed author and creator of the restorative teaching methodology 'RP2.0', Adam has made it his mission to transform education in Australia – one school at a time.

His acclaimed book, Restoring Teaching, now in its second edition, has helped educators rethink their approach to student behaviour, relationships and classroom culture. His latest book, The Truth About Student Behaviour, builds on this work, challenging conventional approaches to behaviour management and offering practical strategies to create calmer, more connected classrooms.

Adam is also the author of Real Questions for Real School Leaders and co-author of Tackling Teacher Wellbeing, extending his work into school leadership and staff wellbeing.

ADAM'S EXPERTISE

- Student behaviour
- Teacher wellbeing/attrition
- Leadership in schools
- School culture
- Restorative teaching and restorative practices in schools
- Bullying (No more anti-bullying programs)

Watch Adam's Speaker Reel

Author and Creator

Author of three books, including the acclaimed Restoring Teaching, and creator of the teaching methodology he calls RP2.0, Adam has taken to print his mission to transform education in Australia – one school at a time.

His groundbreaking book, Real Questions for Real School Leaders, was the first of its kind, challenging school leaders to really understand their school through what Adam calls 'School Self-Awareness.'

He also co-authored Tackling Teacher Wellbeing, a timely guide for school leaders looking for amore thorough, wholesome and reliable approach improve wellbeing both in and out of the classroom.

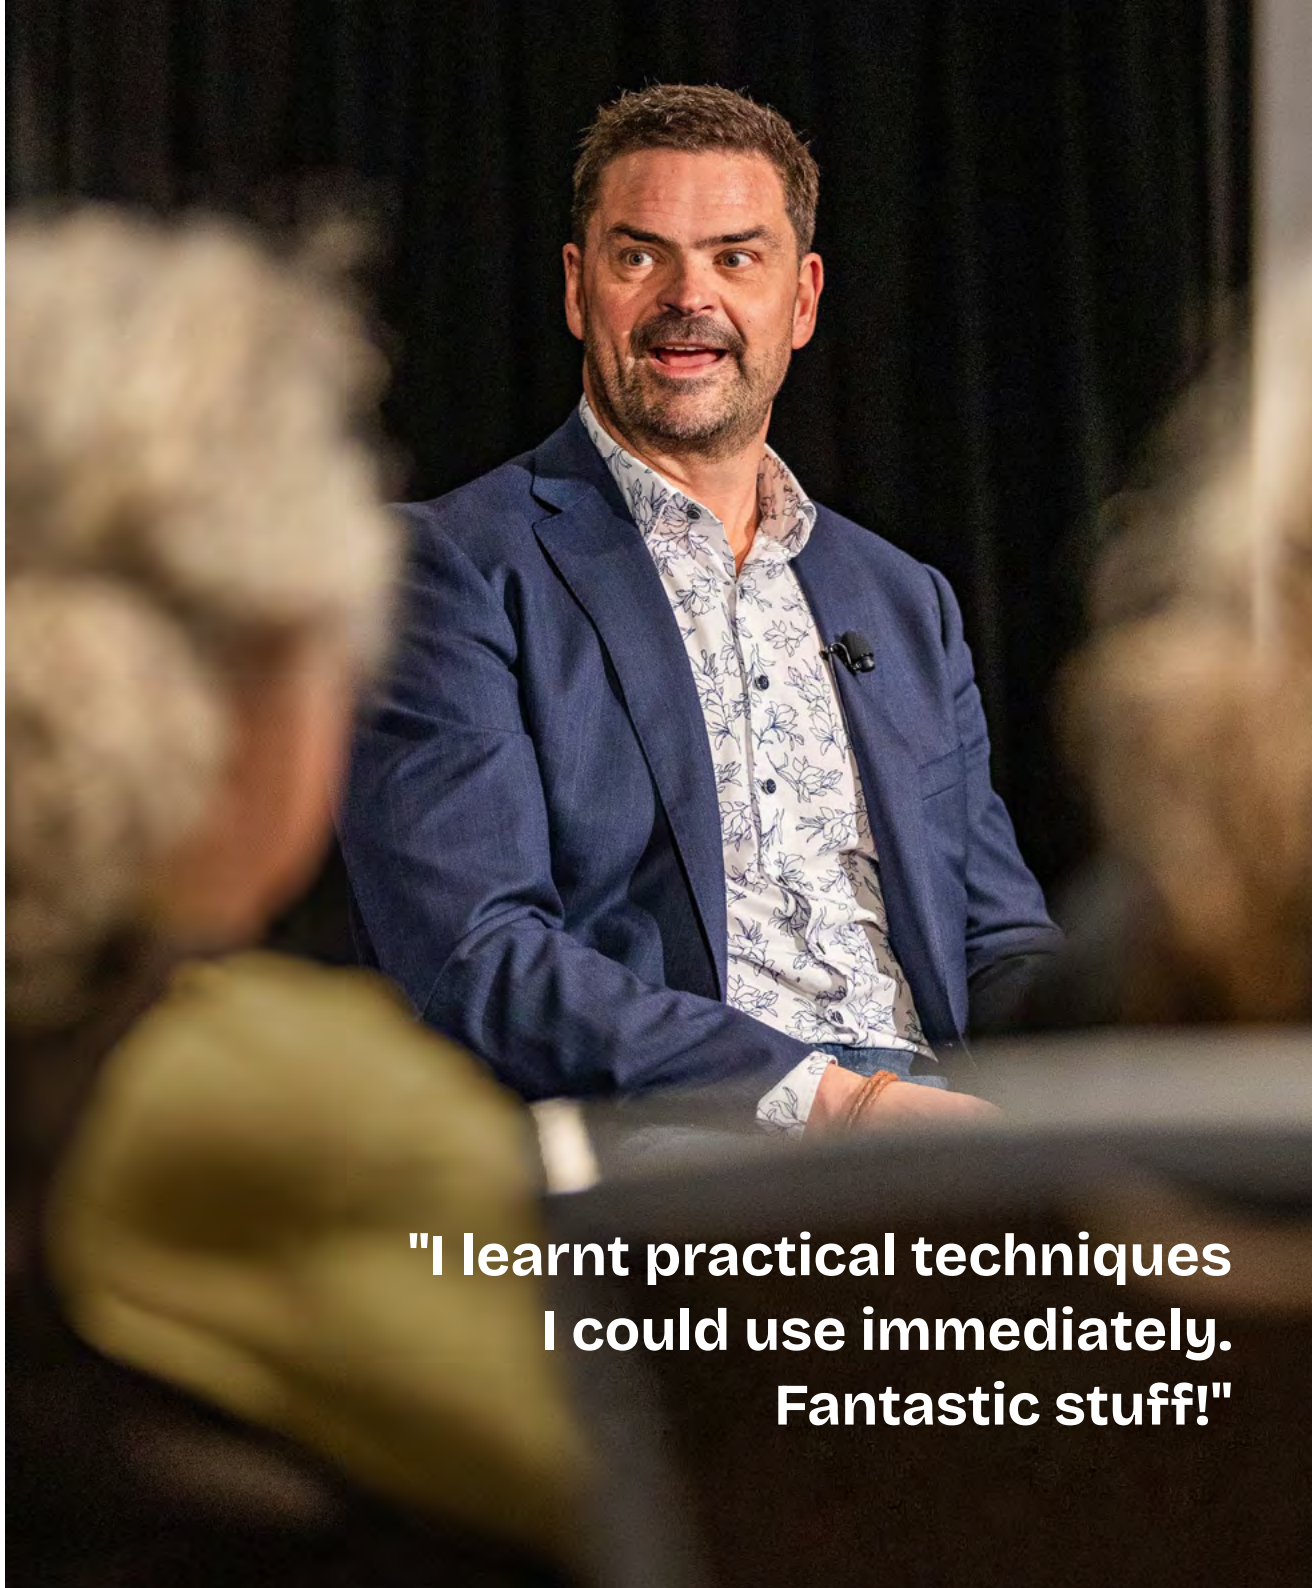

Adam's Keynote Topics

You Had One Job

Do you remember a time when a School Leader's job seemed simple and straight forward? It was, you know... to lead the school! But somewhere across the years we absorbed an inordinate number of ancillary responsibilities as educators and now it can feel as though we're not specialising, making a difference in what matters or even working in our purpose. That needs to stop.

This high-energy and provocative presentation will challenge you to re-imagine your school leadership as a leader of school culture. That really can be your 'one job' if we get clear on what culture is, how it underpins every school objective, how it promotes strong practice, optimises wellbeing and why it's the practical work you were born to do in your school every single day.

The Restorative Future of Student Engagement

Teaching and School Leadership isn't easy at the moment. Amidst converging challenges like teacher shortages, expanding workloads, parental mistrust and student conduct issues, it can be hard to remember why we signed up for this profession sometimes. But there's a better way for us to meet these challenges.

Practicing restoratively is an opportunity for a new level of teacher effect, reduced stress levels, meaningful work and elevated impact. And even better – it engages the students at an exponentially higher level. Sound good?

This presentation is packed with practicality, provocation, laughter and story. Best of all, you'll leave with strategies you can use with success immediately.

Leading School Culture

School Culture is a topic on the lips of most contemporary Australian School Leaders. And while most agree on the importance of culture, few are clear or in agreement on what school culture actually is.

In this presentation, Adam will provide a simple and practical definition of School Culture and provide an insight into a framework that can be implemented easily and efficiently in schools to support their culture.

Adam's contention is that an upgraded version of practicing restoratively - that he calls RP2.0 - is the key to creating a learning environment where all stakeholders can thrive and where the wellbeing of the staff is both respected and nurtured.

The Truth About Student Behaviour

In this highly engaging 60-minute collaborative workshop, Adam will walk participants through everything you wished you knew about why students do what they do in learning environments.

The key to strategising successfully in the classroom is to fully understand your context, your students and what exactly is happening in their brains. What will surprise you is how small the resultant shifts are and how significant the return can be for teachers.

Even when we encounter students who present as lazy, irresponsible or disrespectful - improvement is within your reach.

Culture That Endures

Every school has a culture. But not every school has one that can withstand the pressures of change, challenging behaviour and the relentless demands of school life.

So what separates schools that experience temporary improvement from those that create lasting change?

In this thought-provoking and energising keynote, Adam Voigt challenges school leaders and teachers to rethink how great school cultures are built, strengthened and sustained.

Drawing on his experience working alongside hundreds of schools, Adam explores the power of shared responsibility, strong relationships and everyday interactions in shaping school culture. He challenges educators to lead with both high expectations and grace – creating environments where people are held accountable, treated with dignity and given the opportunity to learn and grow.

"I felt a strong connection to what Adam was saying about changing school culture, and the way we deal with behaviour.

Adam's energy and realism is what makes him one of a kind."

Other Keynote Topics

This is Not Your School

A Classroom Climate for Excellence

Cultivating Culture: Why Strong School Cultures Thrive in Challenging Times

Leading a Restorative School

Start Leading Learner Agency: Opportunities and Challenge

Building Better Boys

Suspending Smarter

We can also tailor topics and presentations to suit your audience needs – just get in touch!

To book Adam for your next conference or event call our Director of Marketing on 0438 811 103 or email charlotte@realschools.com.au

1300 789 422 | info@realschools.com.au

REAL SCHOOLS